Mt. Langley Ascent via Regular Route Summer Ascent of the 9th Highest Peak in California Eastern Sierra Nevada, Lone Pine, CA

General Description: A guided backpack and climb of Mt. Langley via the Regular Route (class 2-3) from New Army Pass. This hike a great way to explore the Southern Sierra Nevada plus climb the 10th highest mountain in California. A great climb for the beginning mountaineer or intermediate backpacker who wants to climb this peak with fantastic views of the Sierra Nevada backcountry. Our route takes on a hike into the Southern Sierra Backpack over Cottonwood pass to Rock Creek Canyon back over New Army with climb of Mt. Langley. Using the regular route up Mount Langley which involves rock scrambling, cross-country hiking, and a short bit of roped climbing. It can be accomplished by anyone in good to excellent physical condition and who has basic backpacking skills. We will teach you the techniques you need to know to safety ascent Mt. Langley 14,022 ft. Give us a call if you have any questions.

Location: Cottonwood Pass to New Army Pass, Mt. Langley, Horseshoe Meadows, Eastern Sierra Nevada.

Itinerary: After meeting in our Lone Pine Office for a pack check, we will drive 30 minutes to the trailhead to Golden Trout Lakes in Horseshoe Meadows at 10,000 ft in elevation.
